
eine sache der natur / a natural thing

A film about getting older and being old. Vision and reality, contemplations and perspectives. A discussion between different generations.

"We all get old one day!" – a laconically spoken sentence. There is a big difference, however, depending on who says it. From the mouth of someone young it sounds like a revelation, from an old person like resignation.

Old and young have their say in this film.

What will it be like when I'm old?
What is it like to be old?
How old do I feel?

Some of these questions are answered in the film, others are posed. And afterwards one looks at age with different eyes.
